

Matthew Stalker

General Overview

Mathew is a Senior Associate at RBB Economics and has worked in economic consulting since 2000. Prior to that he was a researcher with the Centre for Market and Public Organisation at the University of Bristol where he applied advanced econometrics to a variety of topics including insider dealing, inter-temporal poverty transmission and non-financial indicators of firm success.

Experience

Mathew has advised private clients and government authorities on both sector-specific regulation and competition policy. He has assisted clients gain a greater understanding of the economics underpinning industries under review. His experiences covers investigations including merger assessments, anti-competitive agreements, price regulation, private litigation and assessments of dominance in cases before the European Commission, domestic authorities and international arbitration tribunals.

Mathew has particular expertise in the application of empirical techniques for the assessment of competition concerns. He has developed models for predicting consumer behaviour, for assessing firm conduct and for estimating costs and benefits of regulators' actions.

Sector Experience

Mathew's consulting experience covers a broad range of sectors including telecommunications, media, entertainment, financial services, payment systems, government, public bodies, transport and petroleum products.
