

Daniel Gore

General Overview

Daniel Gore is a Senior Associate with RBB Economics and has over six years' experience as a competition economist. He read undergraduate economics at University College London, and received a Master's degree from the University of Warwick, specializing in industrial organisation and competition policy.

Daniel has lectured at Kings College London on the economic aspects of state aid control, spoke at the Association of Competition Economics' 2008 annual conference, and is the co-author of a paper providing an economic perspective on the EC technology transfer block exemption regulation.

Experience

Daniel has worked on mergers and acquisitions raising both horizontal and vertical issues assessed in the EC, UK, Irish, Hungarian and South African jurisdictions. He has advised potentially dominant firms on their commercial position under Article 82 and worked with clients raising abuse of dominance complaints. He has also provided economic analysis on the potential application of competition law to various commercial agreements between firms.

Daniel has advised firms involved in market investigations in both the UK and South Africa, and assisted in the preparation of expert witness reports for litigation. He has also advised on matters before the UK's Competition Appeal Tribunal.

Clients include General Electric, BP, Sainsbury's, OMV, First National Bank, Aviva, Royal Dutch Shell, Topaz Energy, Arqiva, Virgin Media, Agfa-Gevaert, Coillte Teoranta, Alliance UniChem and Companhia Vale do Rio Doce.

Sector Experience

Daniel has provided antitrust advice across a wide range of industries, including petroleum refining and retailing, consumer finance, drug manufacture, pharmaceutical wholesaling, telecommunications, supermarket retailing, pay-television broadcast and retail, cement and concrete manufacture, forestry products, dairy processing, newspaper and magazine distribution, press and printing materials, and the provision of IT systems.
